I would like to stay under $110 for the case, but something around that price band A is good. They offer some really interesting options for of (8) drives. 0 TBH I think you will be fine with most mATX cases for only 3 drives. 1 Do not connect it to a case fan header. Connect this to one of the D LED connectors on the motherboard. The PWM+ARGB controller lets you connect and control up to eight 6-pin RGB fans and two LED strips. I think they probably do. It is not the same and will kill your rgb controller. do you have a remote? Read more Upcoming Events ITMAT Symposium October 10-11, 2022 View full calendar 1 Do not connect it to a case fan header, fans look like these ones, its where I got quote from - - the fans in this kit have a VGD cable, the others don't seem to. This is mostly going to be used for streaming movies I have, and for data storage of larger files, (video files from video editing). I moved question to Cases as its more inline with problem. I would want to check first. Mostly what I'm looking for is a case that is small but can hold at least 3 different hard drives or ssd drives. 0 what case is it? Thanks for your time and help! 0 TBH I think you will be fine with most mATX cases for only 3 drives. I would check with the case maker before doing anything. 0 Yeah thats what I've been running across, there were some cube configurations that offer a fair amount of drive storage. 0 i assume there is a fan hub in case? I have utilized some of the Lian Li Micro ITX cases in such use. 0 Do not connect it to a case fan header. other brands all used the 4 pin connector and Gigabyte swapped to that style on the more recent boards. Okay so if i plug the other cable in the picture it should let me control the lights from the motherboard right ??
