The river cafe london reservations

Restaurant in London, England Not to be confused with River Café (New York City). Coordinates: 51°29′2″N 0°13′27″W﻿ / ﻿51.48389°N 0.22417°W﻿ / 51.48389; -0.22417 The River Café The River Café The River Café is a restaurant in the Borough of Hammersmith and Fulham, London, specialising in Italian cuisine. It was owned and run by chefs Ruth Rogers and Rose Gray until Gray's death in 2010; since then, Rogers has been the sole owner and has run the restaurant. Location The restaurant is located on the north bank of the Thames in Hammersmith, in the former Duckhams oil storage facility; the nearest railway station being Hammersmith tube station. The facility was modified to alternative use by architect Lord Rogers, the husband of Ruth Rogers (Lady Rogers). The restaurant originally opened in 1987[1] as the employee café of the architectural partnership. The restaurant has a garden area with views of the River Thames. Culinary direction Inside the River Cafe Signature dishes include: wild mushroom risotto; Dover sole and John Dory smoked in the restaurant's own wood stove; and rich Italian desserts including lemon almond cake and the chocolate "Nemesis" cake. The restaurant earned a Michelin star in 1997 and is critically acclaimed. The River Café is also notable for the number of successful chefs that have trained in its kitchens. These include Theo Randall, Ed Baines of Randall & Aubin, April Bloomfield of The Spotted Pig in New York, and celebrity chefs Jamie Oliver, Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall, Ben O'Donoghue and Tobie Puttock.[citation needed] Cookery books and recognition Gray and Rogers have written six cookbooks, including Italian Easy and The London River Café Cook Book. Their first book, Italian Country Cookbook won the Glenfiddich Award for Food Book of the Year and the BCA Illustrated Book of the Year award. Rogers and Gray have since presented a 12-part series for Channel 4, The Italian Kitchen.[citation needed] Rogers and Gray each were named in the 2010 New Year's Honours List as Members of the British Empire (MBE) with the citation "for services to the Hospitality Industry".[2] On 28 February 2010,[3] Gray died aged 71 of cancer.[4] See also List of Italian restaurants References ^ "Archived copy". Retrieved from " What's this place all about? Thirty years after it opened, there's still nowhere else in London quite like the River Café, Ruth Roger's iconic Thames-side restaurant. It's deeply glamorous but also charmingly informal; if the white peach Bellinis are famous, so are the paper tablecloths. The airy dining room's always packed, but in summer it's all about the terrace, with its sun-dappled tables, folding chairs and leafy, herb-filled planters. What was the crowd like? It's a noisy mix of media types, off-duty movie stars, and artists like Damien Hirst and Ed Ruscha, both of whom doodled on menus for the handsome thirtieth-birthday cookbook. What should we be drinking? Start with Prosecco served in a highball glass, laced with something delicious: blood orange, crushed fresh raspberries, or (if you're lucky) Italian white peaches. Divided by region, the wine list's a grand tour of Italy, from Friuli's aromatic whites to Tuscany's luscious Chianti. Main event: the food. Give us the lowdown—especially what not to miss. The Italianate menu's wonderfully evocative, conjuring up vague but heady fantasies of a new life in rural Tuscany. This is a kitchen with the confidence not to over-complicate dishes, like green-flecked nettle tagliarini with butter and parmesan, or wood-roasted turbot with flowering oregano, anchovy, and capers. It's fiercely expensive, but everything's the very best, from the peppery green olive oil (Tuscan, of course) to the Scottish scallops, served with a crunchy fritto misto of violetta artichokes and herbs. For dessert, it has to be the chocolate nemesis—unchanging through the seasons, and unfailingly rich and sumptuous. What's the real-real on why we're coming here? Go for it on a languid summer's afternoon (though there is a terrific winter set-lunch deal, it can be hard to snag a reservation), there's no better place to be in all of London. Ode's have been written 'take me back to my favourite terrace spot at the River Cafe' and the restaurant has even opened up an online shop offering their famous fare, but, needless to say, nothing quite compares to dining in situ – as Dame Judi Dench will testify, having made her post-lockdown debut at the restaurant with a lunchtime reservation this week (reportedly feasting on langoustines washed down with a magnum of champagne in the company of fellow food-lover Stanley Tucci).On 4 July, Super Saturday, like with many other restaurants, the doors were heroically flung open to the devoted public once more. Only, owing to the new restrictions, there are fewer tables. Getting a table at the River Cafe was always a hard-won, long-awaited, eagerly-anticipated feat, and that was in the days pre-social distancing, when the tables were always a little too – but comfortably – close, allowing for more covers (and fortuitous people watching). Fashion designer Valentino visits Ruthie Rogers at the River Café Instagram: @therivercafelondon Now, London's social set is fighting over the possibility of a table at the cafe designed by Lord Rogers, frequented by Damien Hirst and loved by Valentino. There's been a charmed handful who have officially secured heaven-sent tables for the coming weeks – others are scrambling to fit in at unusual times. Lunches have been offered at either 12pm or 3pm; and dinners at either 6 or 9.30pm. Why Nobu Pilates is London's hottest new fitness destination To perform my own due diligence, I gave them a call. I offered up a handful of dates in search of a table for two for supper. The conversation went something like this. 15 July? Fully booked. 22 July? Fully booked. Right, let's look a little further to the future, I thought. 21 August? Fully booked. Thankfully, a golden ticket table for two was available on 4 September, but at 9pm. River Café langoustines Instagram: @therivercafelondon It seems that until restrictions are eased, a primi of mozzarella di bufala con caponata alla Siciliana and a tranche of the most deliciously simple wood-roasted turbot for secondi, might have to wait. But, the best things are worth holding out for. More from Tatler In order to see this embed, you must give consent to Social Media cookies. Open my cookie preferences.
